Re-implementation of automation at Mt Stromlo - a progress report

Christopher Moore

The period immediately following the re-establishment of the Mt Stromlo SLR Station was primarily focused on getting the basic (manual) facilities operational again. However more recently, much more effort has been spent on developing systems that will allow the station to return to fully automated and unmanned operations. Progress in this development is discussed, including an overview of the required infrastructure, software and IT issues and functional goals.