

Mount mapping

Randall R. Ricklefs

Typical telescope mount error corrections use an analytical mathematical model. Others have used general high order functions such as spherical harmonics. A less common technique is using a look-up map of corrections for the entire sky. Obtaining ranging data at MLRS usually requires hand paddle offsets in addition to our analytical model. Mapping the sky with these automatically recorded offsets reveals unexpected signatures.